

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

MANY INDIVIDUALS AND INSTITUTIONS SUPPORTED ME THROUGH the thinking, research, and writing that shapes this work. I would like to acknowledge Jose Antonio Lucero and Bret Gustafson, who, through their work as directors of the Global Indigenous Politics group with the Social Science Research Council, helped me think more deeply about early assumptions of my work. Compañeros Simón Trujillo, Cuauhtémoc T. Mexica, Shawn Walker, Jeff Hemsley, Robert Mason, and members of the SOMELAB at the University of Washington also helped me conceptualize ideas around networks and organized human action, in digital environments, in the borderlands, and in the space of civic engagement. The many scholarly conversations I enjoyed within the Indigenous Encounters forum and the Native Organization of Indigenous Scholars at the University of Washington also helped me focus on the particularities and beauty of politics and creative work in Indian Country. Of course, many thanks to the members of the Indigenous Information Research Group at the Information School at the University of Washington: Cheryl A. Metoyer, Miranda Hayes Belarde-Lewis, Sheryl Agogo Gutierrez Day, Allison B. Krebs, Juan Carlos Chavez, Sandy Littletree, and Ross Braine. We work together with one heart. My school is the iSchool. Great respect and honor to Cheryl Metoyer, Maria Elena Garcia, Raya Fidel, and David Levy for helping me prepare this work in a rigorous and readable fashion and for pushing me to think at new heights. Many thanks to Ranjit Arab, who helped edit many drafts. My family, I love you and write for us to overcome violence and tragedy, for all of us to flourish together in a joyful way, in this world and in those beyond.

This project was funded in part through the Institute of Museum and Library Services Washington Doctoral Initiative, the Social Science Research Council Dissertation Proposal Development Fellowship, the Mellon-Sawyer Predoctoral Fellowship through the Simpson Center for the Humanities at the University of Washington, the Chancellor's Postdoctoral Fellowship in American Indian Studies at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, and through higher education funding through the Pascua Yaqui Tribe.

NETWORK SOVEREIGNTY

